THAT on Thursday the 10th of October a current, there came to Stirling a YOUNG MAN, who called hiwfelf WILLIAM COLQUHOUN, and faid, that he was a youth of hiwfelf WILLIAM COLQUHOUN, and faid, that he was a youth of landed property near Greenock, but a minor; and that a gentleman in the west country, who he named, was one of his tutors; and that when at home he lived with the said gentleman. He bought a new solven that the said gentleman is striling, the maker's name Rob. Innes, London, No. 6972; a bar movement, with a sham repeating pendent, with a common steel chain and key; but the young man made his elopement without paying the watch or tavern bill. He was dressed in a drah dussel but on a but under coat and vest, with yellow metal buttons, black breeches, and boots. He is dark complexioned, black short hair, a large cocked hat. He rides on a small brown horse or mare, inclining to a fwitch tail. It is intreated, that all watch-makers, jewellers, or others, who misy see the said watch, may stop the same, and inform the Publisher, or the said Geo. Hutchison watch-maker in Stirling.

N. B. It has been since found, that he goes by different names, particularly that of WILLIAM GAIRDNER.

From the London Papers, Oct. 7.

From the London Papers, Oct. 7. Conflantinople, Aug. 26. The defolation occasioned by the late terrible fire, which confumed more than half of this city, is now aggravated by the scarcity which has ensued; upwards of 500 mills were burnt, with the horfes which worked them, and the grain they contained. In order to relieve the multitude of unfortunate persons who are in want of shelter and subfittence, some tents have been raised, and ovens built. It is computed that above 200,000 persons are reduced to the most flocking mifery. The greatest ferment arose against the Government, and if the Grand Seignior had not timely distributed confiderable fums among the Janiflaries, matters would have been carried to the last extremity. We are beginning to put things in order again, especially in the suburbs of Galata; but it will be a very long time before the damages can be repaired. The dismission of the principal Ministers hath not appealed the discontent of the people, and every thing announces a general fedition. If to these domestic embarrassiments be added the troubles of the Crimea, and the dispositions of Russia, it will be allowed that the Ottoman Ministry must be in great perplexity.

Petersburgh, Sept. 6. By dispatches lately received, and others fent off from this Court to those of London and Vere failles, it is very probable that all these expeditions are relative to the work of a general mediation of the two Imperial Courts, the more fo, as the negociations which had begun at the Court of France do not appear to be attended with fuch fuccefs as the powers interested therein defire.

Vienna, Sept. 14. The fortifications in the greatest part of the towns in Hangary are destroying. All the artillery and ammunition of those places are sent to the artenal of Buda, and that city will be made one of the most formidable fortresses in Hague, Od. 1. We have just received the following private letter from Paris, the contents of which are sufficient to excite the tears of every humane person.

"SIR, Paris, Sept. 25.

"On the 9th, the land batteries began to play on the place. the fire was well supported and directed, and every day made fome progress; there was no doubt therefore entertained, that when the floating batteries began their fire, Gibraltar mult soon capitulate.

"On the 13th, the eleven floating batteries took their fla-tions for attacking the place on the fide next the fea. 'The arrangements having been made without any obstacle, at nine in the morning the firing began from the floating batteries, which mounted altogether 103 brass cannon, and had besides above 150 other cannon, which served for ballast, and for change in case of accidents; these cannon were all 24 pounders.

"The whole firing at once, both from the land and fea, prefented the most dreadful feene that can be imagined; fuccets appeared certain on our fide; but at eleven o'clock the English began firing red-hot balls. One hundred and ten cannon pouring forth an inceffant shower of fiery balls, foon threw the batteries into the utmost disorder; some of the balls entered the port-holes, and the fire foread every where. While the day lasted they were able to extinguish the flames, but at hix o'clock in the evening three of the floating batterics blew up; the rest cut their cables, with au intention of retreating, but without effeet, their tackle, masts, and fails being all burnt, it was therefore impossible or ahem to draw back a fingle step, and the burning hail did not cease. Boats were immediately put out to fave the crews.

"The Prince of Naffau, who had performed prodigies of valour, and who had loft the greatest part of his men, threw himfelf into one of these boats, with several officers, and 152 men belonging to his battery, got into another; at the very instant when this second boat was getting away, a ball fell into the middle of the boat, which immediately sunk, and every person that was in it perished. The next day, at sour in the morning, four more of the floating batteries blew up, and at eight o'clock four more of the floating batteries blew up, and at eight o'clock the eleventh battery caught fire, and blew up in a minute after. The loss of men in this action is computed to be 1500 or 2000. General Elliot faved about 300 men, and fent them back the fame day.

"This terrible shock has not, however, in the least discouraged the besiegers; they are now disposing matters for taking the place by assault, and the soldiers are not at all dismayed.

The fire continues with unremitting fury on the land fide.
"The combined fleet is in the bay of Algefiras; it will therefore be very difficult to throw any fuccurs into the place. The English fleet comes nearer every day, and will probably arrive before the end of the month, and then we may expect to rive before the end of the fee a fecond flaughter."

The two thips Le Suffifant and Le Dictateur, which were lately built at Toulon, from whence they failed on the 29th of August, were yesterday in the Straits; they were intended to join the combined steets, but the Duc de Crillon having on the 2d instant received orders by a courier from Midrid to detain them there, the Duc transmitted this order to them, and these ships anchored at Algesiras the same evening.

From the 4th to the 5th we had 250 workmen this night to complete both the communication and the battery; to repair fome damages occasioned by the enemy's fire, and to mount the fix pieces of cannon, fo that the battery would want nothing but ammunition. There were none wounded this day.

The enemy has fired very little lately, being to work hard at reinforcing, theltering, and victualling their batteries on the

The Come d'Artois, accompanied by the Comte de Dammartin, and fome French and Sparish Generals, went to fee the two new French men of war, and found them very complete and well armed; he croffed, in his way to the thips, the floating batteries, which were failing to Punta Maillorea, where they were to anchor. The Prince had the pleasure of seeing this they moved very well; they could not however all get to matcher yesterday evening.

From the 5th to the 6th the transport of the ammunition continued and they completed the season.

continued; and they completed the traverse between the canon. None were wounded on our fide, notwithstanding the lavish fire of the enemy during yesterday evening, which, however, flackened in the night.

The enemy was at work, and played several mines.

From the 6th to the 7th we had 25 miners in the battery of communication; none wounded.

Don Moreno was employed in founding at the distance of 202 toiles from the place, for the purpose of placing the floar-

The 8th floating battery joined the others at Punta Maillorca; the other two will be finished to-morrow.

From the 7th to the 8th we mounted the trenches; yesterday evening the guard was supplied by the regiment of Bouillon, commanded by the Count de Crillon, the Barons Wimpfen and de Nirenham, and Mess. Parrier and Ihler. The entire the print, but this morning at fix nemy fired very little during the night, but this morning at fix o'clock they threw a great number of fire-pots, and carried the flames as far as the Old Parallel; they supported this fire with bombs and red-hot balls.

We have had already 3 killed and 10 wounded.

We entirely supplied the trenches yesterday evening. To the above particulars we shall add the following, taken from some private letters:

In the morning of the 8th of September, the floating batte-ries to the right had each four additional cannon and eight morparallel, amount to 34. The Duc de Crillon no fooner afked what men were inclined to perform the fervice of the floating batteries, than in the course of the day he had more than the number he wanted. The batteries had some of them 700, others 800 men; they were flocked with provisions and ammu-nition for five days, at the rate of 80 rounds each gun. They have assembled, at Cadiz and other places, all the seamen capable of ferving, and have fent them on board the fleet to replace the fick, which they landed. As it has been observed that the enemy have in some measure changed their plan of defence, they must have had some information from the German soldiers who deferted a fortnight ago from the regiment of Buillon.

The Count d'Artois has endeared himself very much to the army. It is impossible to see a Prince visit a simple under-Lieutenant in the Spanish artillery who was wounded; and to stay with him half an hour, consoling him under his sufferings, without esteeming and admiring so much condescention and hu-

A letter from Madrid fays, that intelligence of the repulse of the troops before Gibraltar has thrown the public into a state of despondency, more easy to be imagined than described; and that universal credit was given to a report, that, since the arrival of the above news, dispatches had been sent to the camp at St Roche, with orders for immediately raising the siege.

Extract of a letter from Paris, Sept. 28.

"We have every reason in the world to think, that notwith-standing the discomsiture of the gun-boats and floating batteries, the Spaniards have not an idea of abandoning the siege of Githe spinnards have hot an idea of actually the lege of Shraltar, and that they will oppose, with their whole naval force, the relief of that garrison. Come d'Aranda declared yesterday, at the Hotel de Richelieu, where he dined, that if there is no action between Admiral de Cordova and Lord Howe, it would be the fault of the lauer, as the former has undoubtedly received orders to hazard every thing in order to prevent the relief of Gibrultar. It is generally reported and credited here, that the combined fleets are drawn up and moored in the bay of Algefiras, where they intend to wait the arrival of the enemy. It is also understood that this plan has been adopted on the suggestion of Comte d'Estaing; the great objection that was at first made to it was, that, in so narrow a space, so very large a sleet could not manœuvre so as to avail itself of its superiority in numbers; but, on the other hand, the Comte observed, that the combined fleets, moored across the bay, would present such a front as it would be next to impossible for the English to force; and moreover, that, in the prefent condition of their ships, the allies would find it a very difficult matter to manœuvre even in the open sea, as their men of war must necessarily be very foul after a four month's cruize: So that, in fact, to fight moored across the bay, was as much the confequence of necessity as of choice."

Extract of a letter from Versailler, Sept. 30.

"The Comptrolleur General des Finances of France, has reason to lament that the King gave leave to his brother, Comte l'Artois, to serve at the siege of Gibraltar, as his Royal Highness draws without the least mercy on the Treasury. He feems not to know the value of money: His table alone occafions a prodigious expence; he has fixty covers every day, to which he invites the Generals, Brigadiers, Colonels, and the officers of his own guards; the Captains are also invited in turn, and dine at a fecond table with his guards, who are all gentlemen, and with the Lords and Gentlemen of his household. When his Royal Highness went to view the floating batteries, previous to the late unfuccefsful attack, be ordered one thousand pistoles to be distributed among their crews; one thanland more among the company of the frigate which carries the flag of the naval commander in chief, Don Bonaventura Moreno; and 50 to his boat's crew. Upon the whole, the Minister of France complains, that this trip has already cost very little short of 1,500,000 livres; so that it will be he remonstrates, to retrench the expences of his Majesty's household, if the Princes of his blood are permitted to swallow up all the favings."

From the London Papers, OA. 8. L. O N D O N.

Yesterday advice was faid to be received from the East-Indies, of an engagement having taken place between the flects under Sir Edward Hughes, and Monf. Suffrein. The action is faid to have continued for two days successively, with the intermission of but a few hours only, and to have ended much to the honour of Sir Edward Hughes, and the interest of the East India Company.

We have not been able to learn the particulars of this engagement, only that the Hero, commanded by Monf. Suffrein, and the Sultan, Capt. Watt, were engaged for upwards of three hours, which terminated in the capture of the Hero, in which the French commander was taken prisoner. We are forry to be informed, that Captain Watt was unfortunately killed in the

The above account we understand to have arrived by the Seahorfe, Captain Montague, who is nearly related to Lord Sandwich.

The following advices were received by an eminent merchant in the city:

Amfterdam, Sept. 28. "We have a variety of intelligence here now in circulation; among the rest, our Paris letter informs us of a second action in the East Indies the beginning of June last, in which De Suffrein is faid to have loft two of his best ships: notwithstanding the politivenels of this account we have our doubts. We are more certainly informed of the arrival of the Schont, and five other ships, from Batavia, at the Cape: the Danish ambassador is not gone: rhe accounts from Gibraliar contain a bloody The Spaniards have loft eleven out of fifteen gunboats, which were moored opposite the garrison, and supported by three line of battle ships; one of which, though at a great distance, had her fore top-mast carried away by the fire from the belieged : an action between the two fleets, which must soon Meet, will determine the prefent campaign,"

No fears need now be entertained for the fafety of New-York, as certain advices are received in town, that the greatest of the fleet which left the West Indies, under the command of Monf. Vaudrenil, were under the necessity of putting into Bo. flon to repair, where it is thought his whole fleet will winter.

It is observed by a correspondent, that if the combined fleets have been at fea, as has been reported, to encounter those severe gales of wind which have impeded Lord Howe and font back one of his convoy, they must have suffered severely; as it is well known, that the Spanish ships were in a most wretched condition, and little able to bear what the sleet of Lord Howe, in the best condition possible, could scarcely resist.

The fame correspondent observes, that the Parisian accounts of the loffes fultained by the Spaniards are given with an exact and minure detail, but the fate of their own theer when fuffering from the engagement of the 12th of April was given with much less precision.

A correspondent hopes that the great number of letters from the continent which came by the last packet, confirming the accounts we formerly received of the destruction of the Spanish floating-batteries and gun-boats, on the 13th of last month, at Gibraltar, will remove the doubts of the most incredulous, and gives us hopes that the excellent General, with his brave garison, will be able to relift the enemy till he is succoured by Lord Howe.

The Prince of Naslau, who commanded the gun-boats in the attack of Gibraltar on the 13th of last month, is the same officer that commanded the body of troops that invefted Jerfey last year. The late difaster before Gibraltar must be doubly painful to the Spainiards, from the lofs of men, and of the large veffels known by the name of the floating batteries, which, after having been fitted out at an immense expence, were totally destroyed, not one of the eleven having escaped.

The fire from the English batteries was fo well directed on this occasion, that a great number of our red-hot balls entered the port-holes of the floating batteries, and thus fet them on The'e batteries were mounted in large ships cut down to a particular fize, and defended in fuch a manner, that there was no other way of fetting them on fire, but by directing the shot right into the port-holes: on the top they were defended by a covering made of cordage and wet hides, which was io claffic, that the shells fell upon them like so many tennis-balls. The veffels themselves were of so very large a fize, that each battery carried from 500 to 700 men; so that the loss in killed and wounded on the fide of the enemy must have been great indeed, considering that the eleven unwieldy batteries were every one funk or blown into the air.

The enemy intended not only to have battered our works on the Old Mole, but actually to have made a landing, if the floating batteries had been fo fuccefsful as to have filenced our fire : for this reason it was that so many men were put on board; and all the foldiers who were on board were volunteers. The day before the attack was made, the Duke de Crillon caufed his army to be informed, that it would be necessary to embark a certain number of troops in the floating batteries; but that as he bad to high an opinion of the gallantry of all the troops he had the honour to command, he wished they would fave him from the mortification of making a discrimination among them, by bestowing an honour on one part, which was well deserved by the whole: upon this, one half at least of the army to red out volunteers, and fent their officers to the Duke, with offers of their voluntary fervices; the General received the deputation from each regiment in its turn; and having completed the necessary number, he returned his thanks to those whose offers he was obliged to decline.

The wretched forcats, or convicts who had been condemned to the gallies, and were brought to the camp before Gibral-tar, with a promife of liberty and pecuniary rewards to those who should furvive the service upon which they were to be employed, have been cut to pieces. Two hundred of these unhappy creatures were fent out to drop the anchors of the floatbatteries, on the 13th ult, within musket-shot of the Old Mole; fo that they were as greatly exposed to the fire of the garrison, as it was possible for man to be : the consequence was, that a dreadful havock was made among them; and few indeed of them will ever prefer their claim to the promifed reward.

By an authentic letter received by a capital house in the city, of a very recent date, the combined fleet, confifting of 50 fail, were lying at Algeliras in order to oppole Lord

The persons who compose the suite of Comte d'Artois, have orders to get themselves in readiness by the 24th or 26th at farthell, to fet out for Cadiz, where they are preparing fe-veral magnificent entertainments for the Prince. It is imagined, therefore, that if Gibraltar should not be taken by that time, they will give up all farther thoughts of attacking it, and raife the frege.

The Spaniards are not yet cured of their mad defigns upon Gibraltar; their fate difgrace feems only to stimulate them to purfue their object, in the face almost of an impossibility to succeed; and growing desperate from their losses, they now talk of taking the place by ftorm.

The last operations at Gibraltar will display in the page of history one of the bloodiest naval scenes ever exhibited, ahat of La Hogue hardly excepted.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed or the engineers who directed our batteries on the late trying aution at Gibraltar. Never were gans better ferved or better directed; and never was more effectual fervice performed. The officers who had the management of them ought to eve their names published to the world, that their country might learn to whom she is to pay the tribute of gratitude.

It is not to be wondered at that General Elliot has hitherto fent home no advices respecting the late attack upon Gibraltar, that garrison being now so completely blockaded both by sea and land, as to render it impossible for any vessel to pass by the befiegers.

By an express received yesterday evening from Plymouth we learn, that the following ships, part of the Jamaica sleet, are arrived there; viz. Prince George, Blackford; Ottley, Banks; Diana, Tanel; Nathaniel Bayly, Morfe; Trelawney, Moore; British Hero, Hill; Ashley, aftle; Peter, Hawes; Beckford, Ayton; Jamaica, Barry; London, Spence; Friendship, ; and three others, names unknown. They parted with the Augustus Casar, Fowler; the Belle, Forster, and the Old Harbour, Brown, for London, on the 22d of September; and on the same day they parted with the Jamaica, Scott, and Milford, Shaw, for Briffol; and on the 26th they parted with the Juliana, Smith, for Glafgow. They fooke with the Catherine, Steel, after the gale. By the above veffels we are forry to learn, that the Dumfries, Capt. Cudie, belonging to the fame fleet, bound to London, foundered in the gale off the banks of Newfoundland, and very few of the crew were faved.

Upwards of forty fail of the Jamaica fleet are yet unaccounted for; but, as none of the convoy are yet arrived, excepting the Canada man of war, there is great reason to hope that many of them collected after the gale, and are now under the protection of the men of war.

We are forry to inform the public, that five of the homewardbound Jamaica fleet were yesterday said to have been loft, one of them with fifty paffengers on board, and that feveral others had fallen into the hands of the enemy. Eng. Chron.

Orders are fent from the Board of Admiralty to the commanding officers at Plymouth, Portsmouth, &c. to give every affishance to the Jamaica seet; and if they press any of the hands to supply their place with a sufficient number of men from the

Mr Peter Graham, from the East Indies, who died lately at Stirling, has bequeathed Fifty Pounds to the Royal Infirmary. His motive for bestowing this donation renders it pe-culiarly acceptable to the Managers. In the early part of his life Mr Graham had been a patient in the Royal Infirmary. The humanity, attention, and skill with which he was treated there, made such a deep impression upon his mind, that, after an interval of many years, he has left this fuan, in order to express his fentiments with respect to the utility of this charitable inflitution, and his grateful remembrance of the benefit which he himself received from it.

This intelligence was communicated to the Managers in a very handsome manner by Mr Graham of Gartmore, and Captain Graham of Deuchray, his executors.

FOR THE CALEDONIAN MERCURY.

PLAN for raifing the ROYAL GEORGE Man of War.

VARIOUS propositions have been fet forth in the public papers for raifing the Royal George, or breaking up the ship to take out the guns, upon the supposition the cannot be

Those who think it impossible to raise her, alarm themselves, by stating the great weight of the ship, her guns, ballast, stores, and quantity of water within and above her.

Before explaining the mode proposed for raising the ship, it is necessary to remove these apprehensions, and to thew, that, in her present situation, she is not so heavy as is generally thought, nor loaded with any additional weight by the water.

From the principles of nature, proven by the laws of hydrostatics, it is well known that bodies lighter than water fwim on it, and that bodies swiming on water displace a quantity of water exactly equal in weight to the bodies themselves; and that all bodies funk in water are lighter, or weigh less, in that situation, than they would do out of it, by the weight of a body of water equal in bulk to the body immerged.

Therefore water, admitted into bodies flink, adds nothing to their weight in that fituation, as the water within them is counterpoised by its equal bulk and weight of the fluid; and water above a body funk adds nothing to its weight, for it is as light, or eafily suspended, near the bottom of the water, as near the top.

Though English oak, of which great part of the Royal George may be built, and fome of the cordage, is specifically, or bulk for bulk, heavier than water; yet several of the other timbers and materials are lighter, and the whole, taken com-plexly, may be supposed about the weight of their bulk of water; confequently, while they are immerged, they are of no weight. It is manifest, therefore, the ship only continues sunk and kept down by a weight equal to the difference by which the weight of the guns, bullets, ballast, and other metals in her, exceed the weight of their own bulk of water; and, when that difference of weight can be overcome, she may be raised from the bottom, and moved in the water. From thence the weight to be raifed may be compated thus:

A cannon that carries a 36 pound ball, weighs 6,000 Libr. pounds; and 100 cannons, supposed, one with another, of that weight, will be 600,000

Allow the bullets, ballast, and other metal about the thip, to amount to double the weight of the cannon, they will be

1,200,000

Total weight of metal in the ship. 1,800,000 There being 576 rounds weight in a cubic foot of iron, the whole metal in the thip will be 3,125 cubic feet; and the weight of 3,125 cubic feet of fea water, computed at 76 To pounds Troy to the foot, will be 239,37$

Remains weight to be raifed in libs. which will be found to be nearly 700 tons. This is all the weight that keeps the Royal George funk, even after allowing the bullets, ballaft, and other metals, to be twice the weight of the guns, which is thought too much; but the propofer cannot determine. Some people may alledge the weight of her to be full that, or more; yet this is not near fo much as many have apprehended, and far from being unfurmountable, as a fingle ship will carry that burden; and as two light hulks, or flips, of a competent fize, would be necessary for the operation, there is no doubt of a fufficient buoyancy being got, which, if applied, would support that weight; and the whole being raifed by the tide, may be moved forward.

The difficulty only remains, how to make a faftening be-ween the Royal George and that power or buoyancy of light hips.

It is faid, the head of her masts, and great pair of for shrouds, appear above water. The shrouds are fixed with the greatest shrength to the sides of the ship, and made to shroug as to support the masts when agitated by the highest winds:

fupport the fore-mentioned weight; and, if that be doubted, affiltance may be given by fome other fastening.

Therefore, let two light ships be brought, one on each fide of the Royal George's masts; and let strong beams of wood be hald not be the color of the strong beams of wood be laid acro's their decks, close to the shrouds, and lashed fail to them at low water. As the tide rifes, it will raife up the whole, which may be moved towards the shore, till the Royal George come aground, where things must remain till next flow of tide, when another purchase may be made, and so on for different tides, till the be brought fo near the thore, that, at low water, her decks, and, perhaps, port-holes, may be dry; fo that, if the is not bilged, the may be pumped clear, and floated to any place thought proper.

The number of tides, or purchases, necessary to bring her so near shore, as to be dry at low water, will depend upon the height the tide rifes at the time; and the first purchase will be most difficult, and gain least ground, particularly if she has wrought herself into a hole in the ground, which must be furmounted all at once before the can be moved forward: but if the depth of that hole does not exceed the height the tide 11fes, after deducting what the buoyant ships fink, and the ropes fretch by the weight, she will certainly be raised out of it, and moved so far towards the shore by the first purchase; all the rest will be easy.

It has been proposed to drag the ship on shore; but if she is at all sunk in the mud, she must first be raised out of it.

Some people dreail, that her being sunk in the sand or mud may keep her so fast that she cannot be raised. If she was funk in a fubstance like wax, impervious to water, that might be the case; but if she has the smallest motion, this shews that water gets down betwixt her fides and the ground; and if the ground be fand, or have fuch a mixture of it as to admit water, that water will get in below her as the rifes, and therefore the will be raifed as eafily as if lying on a hard body, with was ter admitted between the faip and it.

Upon the whole, the proposer apprehends, that, in this way, the Royal George may be raised and brought safe into port.

IN a General Meeting of the Freeholders, Commissioners of Supply, and other Heritors of this county, met here, in confequence of a public advertisement,

The Meeting having considered the Sketch of a Bill drawn out by several Noblemen and Gentlemen lately met at Edinburgh, for the better ordering the Fencible Men in that part of Great Britain called Scotland; and compared the same with a copy of the Militia Bill presented, in May last, by the Right Honourable the Marquis of Graham to the House of Commons, they are unanimously of opinion, that the foresaid Sketch is more adapted to the present state of this country. They therefore approve of faid Sketch, and Observations thereupon by the meeting of the 13th ult. called by the Convener of the Commissioners of Supply of this country. And they request of the Sheris-depute to transmit the foresaid draught and observations to the Right Honourable the Earl of Glencairn, with the thanks of this meeting to his Lordship, and the other Noblemen and Gentlemen, who, along with him, took and the other Noblemen and Gentlemen, who, along with him, took the trouble of preparing the forefaid sketch. The Meeting also beg leave to return their sincere thanks to the Right Hon, the Marquis of Graham, for his attention to the prefent defencelefs thate of this country, in which they doubt not his Lordhip, and every well-wisher of this country, will persevere, until they procure the sanction of Parliament for searing the internal defence of this part of the united king-dom. This Meeting abbres to the resolutions until the General dom. This Meeting adhere to the resolutions passed by the General Meeting of the 30th of April last, respecting the present unconstitutional mode of election; and recommend to the Sherisf-elerk, to transmit the subscription-paper, relative to this matter, to the several Heritors in this county, who have not yet had an opportunity of fubfcribing the fame. The Meeting are further of opinion, that it would be highly beneficial to this county, to procure the permission of Parliament for creeting stills of a smaller size than are at present allowed. And they name the Right Honourable Lord Macdonald, Sir James Grant of Grant; Baronet, James Grant, Esq. Advocate, James Fraser and Charles M'Intolh, writers to the signet, or any two of them, for contribution with compilities of allower countries the property mode of an ancriting with committees of other guere, or any two of truen, for certing with committees of other counties, the proper mode of an application to Parliament for this purpose. And they ordain these their resolutions to be inserted in the Edinburgh news-papers.
